Tekin' yah time ain't laziness" quotes Jair Dynast in a Barbadian twang referring to a saying his mother, Peta Graves, a former Miss Barbados and a contestant in the Miss World pageant often uses. Jair is talking about his patient and hard working attitude towards his career. The Bajan born rapper/producer immigrated to Canada some 19 years ago to a cold climate with equally cold streets that presented many short falls compared to the beautiful tropics. Refusing to be caught in the trap many of his friends fell victim to, the "One Whom God has Enlightened" fell in love with basketball. Jair earned himself a full athletic scholarship to South Plains, a Nationally Ranked Division I Junior College in Texas.

However, as fate would have it, the scholarship was short lived because he was diagnosed with Hypertrophic Cardiomyopathy, a heart ailment which ended his promising career. "Never to be the average cat", to quote his recording "Struggle" which chronicles the whole ordeal – Jair soon found his true calling. He picked up the microphone and hasn't looked back. Jair spent the next few years honing his craft and paying his dues on the streets of the "screwface capital" doing everything from free showcases to hustling his crew's mixtapes to apathetic consumers.

To quote the late great Notorious B.I.G. "things done changed". Signing to indie Hip Hop label eMultimedia Group, Inc. in July 2004, Jair Dynast made an impressive impact on the North American Underground Hip Hop scene. His debut 12-inch "SnakeEyes" peaked at #4 on Rapattack/ives and Rapnetwork's Top 30 charts in May 2005.

Eager to build on his success, Jair hit the studio with a vengeance – writing, producing and recording his solo debut album V.I.A.L.E.N.C.E. a clever acronym meaning Vicious Ignorance Amounts to Little Except Negative Consequences n' Expression. "The album is me, my surroundings and true events that either happened to me or those very close to me", states Jair. "It's very much for the quite unquote streets but not glorifying or objectifying what goes on. It's social commentary. I'm discussing real issues that effect real people like love, lust, poverty, betrayal, jealousy, racial profiling and politics."

Speaking of politics, one of the songs recorded for the album is "Can't Wait" (Apathy is Boring) the theme song for a new 13-part CBC T.V. series "Make Some Noise". The program showcases the inspiring and innovative accomplishments of young Canadians, like Jair Dynast, who are changing the world. "Can't Wait" is a poignant call to action for the youth by a youth. Jair uses his gritty, metaphor-laden delivery to inspire his community to be

Jair Dynast - A Well Rounded Curriculum Vitae
on Monday, January 10, 2005 - 08:46 PM

 In today's Hip Hop music industry where fans are sometimes inundated with songs about nothing, emerges Jair Dynast. With every song the producer/recording artist invites the listener into his world sharing his most personal thoughts and experiences through passionate word play and moving production.

With his last release "Curriculum Vitae" Jair Dynast has crafted a well rounded resume of his work as a producer, artist and songwriter to date. The album features songs performed, composed, produced and written by Jair and is a prelude to his latest single, "Get Up" and another album to follow later this year

Jair is set to introduce the introspective "Struggle", a song that tells the story of a born fighter who is willing to go up against the odds to achieve success. "Niggaz like, "wake up dawg that's all a dream" - I looked the Devil in the face and called his fire steam" spits Jair as he describes his days struggling to hone his skills and be a standout high school basketball player. This led him to attain an athletic scholarship to play at South Plains, a Nationally Ranked Division I Junior College in Texas.

On "Curriculum Vitae" Jair Dynast "sounds both bitter and content at once". "His story of hardship reminds us of Kanye West's jaw-wiring personal drama". In spite of being a producer album, the "a cappella opener and closers "Militant" and "Life Value" prove, he can in fact flow".

When life hands you lemons, make lemonade. That's exactly what Jair Dynast did when he was diagnosed with an unfortunate heart condition that shattered his dreams of becoming a professional basketball player.

When Jair was diagnosed with hypertrophic cardiomyopathy, which disabled him from playing basketball at a top ranked junior college in the United States, he was faced with a life-changing challenge. The road he dreamed of travelling on for most of his adolescent life was blocked off for good. He was forced to make a decision: "What am I going to do now?" he asked himself when he learned of his condition.

"I always thought that no matter what, I was going to play basketball," he said. "When I found out about it, it killed me. I didn't know what to do. My whole life was basketball."

Jair was consumed with basketball and recalls playing on recreational teams and at neighborhood basketball courts around the GTA as a youngster. As he got older, Jair's athletic abilities improved and his aspirations to become a professional in the sport were reaffirmed. Jair was determined to be successful and reach his goal at any cost.

Jair travelled all over the United States and attended national basketball camps to

JAIR DYNAST - A BIOGRAPHY By Beau Trickey

Jair means "one whom God has enlightened". The scrawny Bajan kid, immigrated to Canada at the impressionable age of seven. At the time, hardly understanding what his name meant and how its karma would guide him. Growing up, there was always food but his apartments were very small and the neighborhoods where he lived were full of lost souls. Kids were emulating their older brothers, starting out with petty crimes: stealing tapes and brand name shoes.
